Synopsis:

Three daring teenagers journey into the darkest corners of the internet in search of the world's most banned film Movie 43 and encounter a series of gloriously offensive videos along the way, each becoming more and more uproarious as they tentatively venture into the unknown! From 'The Catch' where Kate Winslet stars as a woman on a blind date with the ever-so charming Hugh Jackman, who is by all description perfect. He's talented, immensely handsome, successful in his career and has shown a lot of balls for a man on a first date. Quite literally so! To 'Veronica', where Emma Stone and Kieran Culkin star as former lovers who's final farewell swiftly turns into a sexual discussion and humorous lament over their relationship with topics including HPV and fingers up the bum, the teenagers can only dare to imagine what the mystical Movie 43 will behold and what the consequences of watching it will be!

We like it because:

Hugh Jackman with a pair of testicles dangling from his chin; Halle Berry unconventionally whipping up guacamole with her breast; Richard Gere getting hands on with the latest iBabe... It's so refreshing to see some of Hollywood's most serious and Oscar-chasing actors of past and present drop the pretense, release their inner teenagers and clearly have a whale of a time doing so! If there was ever a film to make you hark back to the carefree days of inappropriate jokes, even worse haircuts and highly-questionable fashion senses, then let it be Movie 43! Celebrate your cheeky streak with this jaw-achingly outrageous comedy that will have you gasping for air as you cackle with delight and disgust!

Special Features:

DVD: Trailer and Deleted Short 'Find Our Daughter'

Blu-ray: Alternate Cut 'The Pitch', Trailer and Deleted Short 'Find Our Daughter'
