Synopsis:

When English literature professor Mike Lawford's (Nicolas Cage) takes his son Charlie (Jack Fulton) to a Halloween parade, Charlie mysteriously disappears.

A year later, Mike begins to see visions of his missing son and he suspects there's a link between Charlie and hundreds of other missing children. As Mike begins to put the clues together, he uncovers something more terrifying than he ever imagined...

Why we like it:

Based on a story by British horror novelist Tim Lebbon (Dusk), Pay the Ghost comes from a good pedigree. It calls back to classic suspenseful chillers such as Don't Look Now and The Innocents, while delivering big shocks and filmmaking style of contemporary horror hits that include Insidious, Sinister and The Conjuring.

Nicolas Cage is perfect in the leading role, doing what he does best as a man possessed. The supporting cast is also captivating, with genre favourites Sarah Wayne Callies (The Walking Dead) and Lyriq Bent (the Saw series) adding some fan-pleasing horror gravitas.

There's also a new terrifying version of the boogeyman on hand, who's all set to join the likes of the Bughuul and Lipstick-Faced Demon in the new generation of horror monsters. See it if you dare!
