Fast Sell:

Having screened to sold-out audiences at this year's prestigious BFI London Film Festival, "From A To B" is the second feature by British-Emirati director Ali F. Mostafa (City of Life) about the power of friendship across an ever-changing landscape. With riveting debut performances from its Middle Eastern leads, this is a must-see road movie filled with speedbumps, breakdowns, wrong turns, shady mechanics and a camel or two along the way...!

Synopsis:

Five years after the loss of his best friend Hady, Omar decides to take the road trip they always talked about, but never got to take. Just days away from the birth of his first child, he reaches out to his estranged high school friends Jay and Ramy to take the road trip in Hady's memory.

Jay, now a playboy/ wannabe DJ, and Ramy, an #activist (with 737 twitter followers!), take some convincing, but finally agree to the trip. The boys decide to drive from Abu Dhabi – via Saudi Arabia, Jordan, and Syria to arrive in Beirut, on what would have been Hady's twenty-fifth birthday.

If all of this doesn't drive them crazy, it might just bring them closer.

We like it because:

Once again director Ali F. Mostafa offers a refreshing new perspective on life in the Gulf and Middle East, as he achieved so remarkably with "City of Life". Boasting strong debut performances from the three lead actors, including Saudi stand-up comic Fahad Al Butairi who has often been coined the 'Seinfeld of Saudi Arabia', "From A To B" challenges the cultural taboos of the region and celebrates the importance of diversity through a serious dose of comedy, an incredible soundtrack with songs from across Lebanon, Algeria and Egypt, and a powerful message about friendship. After all it's not about the destination, it's about the time you spend together on the road.
