

31 Southampton Row, London WC1B 5HJ
Tel: 0203 585 1396 Web: fetch.fm

P R E S S R E L E A S E

Tank 432 (aka Belly of the Bulldog)

“A heady blend of Dog Soldiers and Jacob’s Ladder” Sight & Sound

On DVD & Download from Monday 22nd August 2016

Fast Sell:

From executive producer Ben Wheatley (director of Kill List and High-Rise) comes this knife-edged thriller about a gang of mercenary soldiers who take cover in an abandoned bulldog tank – only to find the real enemy is within.

Written and directed by longtime Wheatley collaborator Nick Gillespie (Sightseers, A Field In England), Tank 432 is the next chapter in their very British brand of terror – unnerving, surreal, and gut-wrenchingly tense.

Key Talent:

Rupert Evans (Hellboy, Agora, TV’s The Man In The High Castle)

Michael Smiley (Kill List, The World’s End TV’s Luther)

Deirdre Mullins (Doghouse, TV’s Man Down)

Steve Garry (Samuel and Emily vs. The World, Unwelcome)

April Pearson (Skins, Age of Kill)

Gordon Kennedy (Final Prayer, TV’s Robin Hood, TV’s Sherlock)

Tom Meeten (Paddington, Sightseers, Burke & Hare)

Alex Rose March (Samuel and Emily Vs. the World)

KALEIDOSCOPE
HOME ENTERTAINMENT

RELEASE INFORMATION

Distributor Kaleidoscope Home Entertainment

Certificate TBC

Release date 22nd August, 2016

KEY TALENT INFORMATION

Director Nick Gillespie

Executive Producer Ben Wheatley

Stars

- Rupert Evans
- Michael Smiley
- Deirdre Mullins
- Steve Garry
- April Pearson
- Gordon Kennedy
- Tom Meeten
- Alex Rose March

CONTACT/ORDER MEDIA

Thomas Hewson - Tom@fetch.fm

Writer & Director

Nick Gillespie (The Shadow Seamstress, Sightseers, A Field In England)

Executive Producer

Ben Wheatley (High Rise, Sightseers, Kill List)

Synopsis:

On the run and with nowhere to hide, a group of mercenaries find themselves surrounded by an unidentified enemy. As gunfire hails down and their mysterious pursuers begin to close in, they must keep moving to find safe shelter.

The only chance of survival is to hide inside an abandoned tank discovered by inexperienced soldier, Reeves (Rupert Evans). Once holed up inside the tank, they quickly discover the hatch is jammed and there is no way out.

As the mercenaries begin their desperate search for anything that may aid their escape, they fall upon a shocking discovery: confidential files on dozens of soldiers; all listed as missing in action. Within those listed, are their own names.

As discoveries are made inside the tank and they struggle to keep forces outside at bay, little do they realise the real enemy is already amongst them, locked inside Tank 432.

We Like It Because:

As a regular collaborator since Kill List, Nick Gillespie is a key part of the distinctive Ben Wheatley style – a style that's redefining British horror. Tank 432 has it in full force, with disturbing and disorienting visuals and an unsettling sense of near-psychedelic claustrophobia.

Gillespie makes the film very much his own though, combining his unique story concept and knack for getting under the characters' skins to make the tension unnervingly real. It's gripping stuff, from the start to its nerve-shredding finish.

There's an incredible cast of character actors on hand to turn the tension levels up even further. Rupert Evans proves that he's one of the UK's most reliable talents, while Michael Smiley cements his place as a true gem of British cinema.

Intense, terrifying and occasionally mind-bending, Tank 432 is the year's must-watch British horror.

Hot Quotes:

"A heady blend of Dog Soldiers and Jacob's Ladder" Sight & Sound

"Tense, atmospheric & enthralling" Hey U Guys

"A mind-bending trip into madness and fear" Dread Central

"Surreal, weird and totally terrifying" Starburst

"Leaves you gasping for air" ★★★★★ Horror Channel

"Pulses with the raw and unapologetic British sensibility" Film International

"A claustrophobic hallucinogenic nightmare" The Fan Carpet

"Intense and nightmarish combat horror" ★★★★★ Fortean Times

"Gripping, claustrophobic and intense." SciFiNow

"A wilfully, refreshingly surreal brain-twister" Scott Weinberg, The Horror Show