We like it because

“You’re alive - act like it”

The stakes are raised in this sequel to Jim Mickle’s 2010 horror hit, with original star, and writer, the gruff, gravelly-voiced Nick Damici (who, on any other planet, would be a superstar by now), returning as the no nonsense vampire hunter Mister, and produced by Mickle and horror genre favourite Larry Fessenden (The House of the Devil, The Innkeepers) through his Glass Eye Pics studio.

Directors Dan Berk and Robert Olsen hit the ground running here, picking up where the final film left of and plunging the viewer into the world of the wheezing, wrathful berserkers, as Martin (Connor Paolo from Gossip Girl, Revenge, Stake Land), sets out to find truly nasty fanged fiend The Mother (Kristina Hughes), and discovers the vampires aren’t his only problem in a world where survivors will do anything to get by. The film also brings back genre hero Mister to dispense killer lines (“You got your whole life to die, kid - no point rushing it”) and carnage the only way he knows how.

A worthy and welcome companion to the original film, this is as thrilling as the TV smash hit The Walking Dead, and dust-blown streets ahead of I Am Legend. STAKE LAND II is a brilliantly bleak and bloody bucket of vampire horror, brimful of satisfying vampire kills and carnage.
